Designed for your work.
Reviewed through real communication.

Time spent studying is only part of the picture. We review what you can communicate when the conversation is real.

01

Understand the real situation

Start with the work, the people and the conversations. Identify what needs to change.

02

Design around your goals

Build a curriculum and original materials around your objectives and starting point.

03

Practise the conversations that matter

Rehearse meetings, explanations and dialogue, with specific feedback you can apply.

04

Review progress and move forward

Use baseline, interim and final reviews to identify what is improving and what to work on next.

Use CEFR to discuss your starting point

We connect CEFR-informed speaking assessment with real work goals to make practice specific. Performance varies by skill and situation, and not everyone needs to aim for C2.

Explain a proposal in a meeting

Workplace challenge	Having an opinion, but struggling to explain it or respond to questions.
Relevant practice	Structure a proposal, explain the reasons, clarify and rehearse questions.
Progress review	Could the listener follow the explanation? Could the speaker respond to questions?

The people behind the practice.
The organisations we support.
